

The New York Times

The City

WINE UNDER $20

A Zippy Rosé From Austria

ARTICLE TOOLS
SPONSORED BY

GO BEHIND THE SCENES

By HOWARD G. GOLDBERG

Published: June 1, 2008

South Styria (Südsteiermark) is known as Austria's Tuscany, and its sparkling rosé is called schilcher sekt in German.

Strohmeier's nonvintage version is a seductive introduction to the genre. Made from blauer wildbacher grapes, this light, zippy aperitif smells like tea roses and tastes like caraway.

Crush, 153 East 57th Street (Third Avenue), charges $16.19.